Accounting policies and limitations

The figures were reconstructed from seven complete bunq transaction exports, starting from a confirmed combined opening balance of € 0. Internal transfers are excluded from income and expenses. Refunds of unsuccessful international payments reduce the original project expenses. The treasurer confirms that there were no other assets, receivables, debts or unpaid invoices at the reporting date.

Expenses for the first family have been combined where transaction descriptions do not permit a reliable breakdown. The treasurer estimated an indicative allocation of approximately 80% education and 20% entrepreneurship. This estimate is not presented as an audited split of the annual figures. According to the treasurer, donations carried no exclusive external spending restrictions beyond the foundation’s purpose.

In 2024, sewing machines and equipment worth € 2,500 were provided to women in Kenya. The women became the owners of the machines; the foundation did not retain the equipment as an asset. In addition, € 388.62 was spent on emergency overnight accommodation for the first family. The financial records distinguish these project expenses from banking and website costs. Attribution of certain other onward transfers to individual activities continues to rely on the treasurer’s explanation.

Activities report

Support for the first family continued, including payments for education, support for entrepreneurship and emergency overnight accommodation. EmpowHER also carried out a project in which women in Kenya received sewing machines and became their owners. The recorded acquisition cost was € 2,500; according to the treasurer, there were no additional transport, training or supervision costs. Some funds were forwarded through a contact person without any personal remuneration.

Adoption and review

The annual accounts were approved by the board on 23 October 2026. According to the board, the expert review required under the articles of association was performed and approved. The amounts were reconstructed from bank transactions; separate bank balance statements are not available.

This version includes editorial corrections approved by the board; all financial amounts remain unchanged.
